MILLENIALS OF COLOR on CONTRACEPTION

86% say contraception is basic health care that should be covered by health insurance.

79% agree that teen sexual development is a normal part of growing up and the best approach is to ensure that young people have all the information and education that they need.

41% say they did not receive enough information about sex and birth control growing up.

88% say sex education in schools should include how to prevent unplanned pregnancy by using birth control and condoms.

84% say contraception needs to be available and affordable to help young people stay healthy.

AS PARENTS...

71% will teach their kids how to use condoms.

68% will take their teen to get birth control.

www.advocatesforyouth.org/millennials